Correction to: Cryoballoon Ablation for the Treatment of Atrial Fibrillation in Patients with Concomitant Heart Failure and either Reduced or Preserved Left Ventricular Ejection Fraction: Results from the Cryo AF Global Registry

In the article by Roberto Rordorf et al, “Cryoballoon Ablation for the Treatment of Atrial Fibrillation in Patients With Concomitant Heart Failure and Either Reduced or Preserved Left Ventricular Ejection Fraction: Results From the Cryo AF Global Registry” which published online December 10, 2021 (J Am Heart Assoc. 2021;10:e021323. DOI: 10.1161/JAHA.121.021323) and was included in the December 21, 2021 issue of the journal, a correction was needed.

In Figure 2, under “No. at Risk”, “PHF & HF” has been corrected to read “PAF & HF.” PAF indicates paroxysmal atrial fibrillation.

The authors regret the error.
