A basic list of 133 book and journal titles in dentistry is presented. The list is intended as a bibliographic selection tool for those libraries and health institutions that support clinical dentistry programs and services in the nondental school environment in the United States and Canada. The book and journal titles were selected by the membership of the Dental Section of the Medical Library Association (MLA). The Dental Section membership represents dental and other health sciences libraries and dental research institutions from the United States and Canada, as well as from other countries. The list was compiled and edited by the Ad Hoc Publications Committee of the Dental Section of MLA. The final list was reviewed and subsequently was approved for publication and distribution by the Dental Section of MLA during the section's 1996 annual meeting in Kansas City, Missouri.

This list of 133 dental titles is intended as a bibliographic selection tool in support of clinical dentistry in the nondental school library in the United States or Canada. There are approximately 300 nondental schools or locations in the United States with accredited advanced dental education programs located in hospitals, Veterans Affairs medical centers, research centers, and other health care facilities [1]. At the present time the American Dental Association recognizes eight dental specialties: dental public health, endodontics, oral and maxillofacial surgery, oral pathology, orthodontics, pediatric dentistry, periodontics, and prosthodontics [2]. Most nondental school sites provide library services and resources for their professional staff, which may include dentists, oral surgeons, and students in advanced or post-doctoral dental specialty education programs as well as dental hygienists and other dental auxiliaries. The "Basic List of Recommended Books and Journals" was developed to support the information needs of these clinical dentistry personnel in the nondental school environment.

The dental practitioner is expected to continue lifelong learning. This precept was underscored by the Committee on the Future of Dental Education of the Institute of Medicine (IOM), which identified it as "[o]ne of the guiding principles . . . that learning is a lifelong enterprise for dental practitioners. It cannot stop with the awarding of a degree or the completion of a residency program. Continuing dental education is a part of the continuum of education. . . ." [3] In the pursuit of lifelong learning, oral health care professionals may use one or more of the standard editions of dental textbooks, as well as published clinical and research articles found in reputable dental journals, to maintain a basic foundation of knowledge. The oral health care professional should be assured access to a core collection of book and journal titles in a nondental school library for support of research efforts, patient care, and education. This list of recommended titles provides the bibliographic foundation for this core collection. The oral health care professional should also be assured access to MEDLINE and other MEDLARS databases, and should be provided with reasonable access to telecommunications gateways such as the Internet, including the World Wide Web, in the library or a comparable environment [4].

A longer list of book and journal titles was initially drafted by the Medical Library Association (MLA) Dental Section Ad Hoc Publications Committee in 1994. Various versions of the draft list were circulated to the Dental Section membership for review and comment between 1995 and 1996. When appropriate, Dental Section members shared copies of the draft list with oral health care practitioners and dental school faculty for their comments. A draft list was also distributed electronically in 1995 to members of the Dental Section's e-mail discussion group, DENTALIB, for their review and comments. DENTALIB subscribers include librarians, dental educators, and oral health care practitioners from institutions around the world. All suggestions and comments received were reviewed by the Ad Hoc Publications Committee, and revisions to the list were made accordingly. The final list of ninety-three book and forty journal titles was approved for general distribution by the Dental Section at its 1996 annual meeting.

This list is by no means definitive or comprehensive, and represents only a small percentage of the available information in dentistry and oral health titles published in the last ten years. All recommended book and journal titles are, as of 1996, currently available from the publisher and have been recognized by the MLA Dental Section as providing up-to-date, authoritative, and factual information for the clinician. Out-of-print titles were excluded from the list, as were titles issued in formats other than printed text, such as CD-ROM, mixed media, and multimedia (laser disc, audiovisual cassettes, slides, etc.). Also excluded from this list is the growing body of resources in electronic formats, including full-text copy, which are accessible through various telecommunications gateways.

Recommended book titles are grouped alphabetically by authors' last names under twenty-nine broad subjects, while journals are arranged alphabetically by title without subject categorization. Each title on the "Basic List" is recommended for purchase by the nondental school library. Titles marked with an asterisk (*) are recommended for first or priority purchase. These indicated titles have been identified by the MLA Dental Section as representing important contributions to the study and research in clinical dentistry. The book list includes the price of the book in U.S. dollars as of 1996. The international standard number (ISBN for books and ISSN for journals) has been provided for each title to aid in the electronic searching of online catalogs and the ordering of titles. This list will be updated every two years by the MLA Dental Section.
