

Published in final edited form as:

J Am Geriatr Soc. 2016 August ; 64(8): 1752. doi:10.1111/jgs.14572.

Erratum for: Association Between Oral Health and Cognitive Status: A Systematic Review

Bei Wu, PhD,

School of Nursing, Duke University

Gerda G. Fillenbaum, PhD,

Center for the Study of Aging and Human Development Aging and Human Development

Brenda L. Plassman, PhD, and

Center for the Study of Aging and Human Development & Department of Psychiatry and Behavioral Sciences, Duke University Medical Center, Durham, North Carolina

Liang Guo, BS

School of Nursing, Duke University

---

This article corrects: Association Between Oral Health and Cognitive Status: A Systematic Review Volume 64, Issue 4, 739–751, Article first published online: 1 April 2016

Dear readers

In the article above,[1] the supplementary information shown below was erroneously omitted:

SUPPORTING INFORMATION

Additional Supporting Information is found in the online version of this article:

Table S1. Diagnostic criteria and assessments of oral health used in longitudinal studies of oral health and cognitive status. (Superscripts refer to Reference section of paper.)

Table S2. Diagnostic criteria and assessments of cognitive status used in longitudinal studies of oral health and cognitive status. (Superscripts refer to Reference section of paper.)

Table S3. Covariates used in studies of oral health and cognitive status. (Superscripts refer to Reference section of paper.)

Please note: Wiley-Blackwell is not responsible for the content, accuracy, errors, or functionality of any supporting materials supplied by the authors. Any queries (other than missing material) should be directed to the corresponding author for the article.

References

1. Wu B, Fillenbaum GG, Plassman BL, et al. Association between oral health and cognitive status: A systematic review. J Am Geriatr Soc. 2016; 64:739–751. [PubMed: 27037761]