

Meneghini M, Melilli E, Martorell J, et al. Combining sensitive crossmatch assays with donor/recipient human leukocyte antigen eplet matching predicts living-donor kidney transplant outcome. Kidney Int Rep. 2018;3:926–938

Kidney Int Rep (2019) 4, 634; <https://doi.org/10.1016/j.ekir.2019.02.019> © 2019 International Society of Nephrology. Published by Elsevier Inc. This is an open access article under the CC BY-NC-ND license (<http://creativecommons.org/licenses/by-nc-nd/4.0/>).

In the above-mentioned article, the Acknowledgments are as follows:

This work was funded by 2 national Spanish grants from the Spanish Institute of Health (ISCiii; PI13/01263 and PI16/01321), FEDER funding, a way to build Europe. Also, this work was partially supported by the European commission grant BIO-DRIM (No.FP7/2007-2017). OB did also have an intensification research grant from the National Institutes of Health (ISCiii; INT15/00112). We also would like to acknowledge our Biobank unit for the careful management of all our samples.

We thank CERCA Programme / Generalitat de Catalunya for institutional support. We are thankful to Cristian Tebe (Statistical Department, IDIBELL Bellvitge Biomedical Research Institute, Barcelona) for his help in the statistical analyses. MM received a fellowship grant from ESOT (European Society for Organ Transplantation).
