

Figure S2. Hemp plants grown under different light conditions are different in size. Hemp plants of the cultivar ‘Fedora 17’ accumulate less biomass and are less durable if grown under ultra-short days with only 8 hours of light (a) as opposed to plants grown under 12 hours of light (b), plants grown under 16 hours of light (c) and plants grown under continuous light (d).