Dear Dr Ajjola,

Re: JP-P-2023-285309 "The Promise of Cardiac Neuromodulation: Can Computational Modeling Bridge the Gap?" by Olujimi A Ajjola and Michael B. Liu

We are pleased to tell you that your paper has been accepted for publication in The Journal of Physiology. Please see the complimentary comments of the reviewers below.

TRANSPARENT PEER REVIEW POLICY: To improve the transparency of its peer review process, The Journal of Physiology publishes online as supporting information the peer review history of all articles accepted for publication. Readers will have access to decision letters, including Editors' comments and referee reports, for each version of the manuscript, as well as any author responses to peer review comments. Referees can decide whether or not they wish to be named on the peer review history document.

The last Word (or similar) version of the manuscript provided will be used by the Production Editor to prepare your proof. When this is ready you will receive an email containing a link to Wiley's Online Proofing System. The proof should be thoroughly checked and corrected as promptly as possible.

Authors should note that it is too late at this point to offer corrections prior to proofing. The accepted version will be published online, ahead of the copy edited and typeset version being made available. Major corrections at proof stage, such as changes to figures, will be referred to the Editors for approval before they can be incorporated. Only minor changes, such as to style and consistency, should be made at proof stage. Changes that need to be made after proof stage will usually require a formal correction notice.

All queries at proof stage should be sent to: TJP@wiley.com.

Are you on Twitter? Once your paper is online, why not share your achievement with your followers? Please tag The Journal (@jphysiol) in any tweets and we will share your accepted paper with our 30,000 followers!

Yours sincerely,

Natalia Trayanova
