

Figure S1

Figure 1. Supp. Distribution of human gene duplications according to the degree of protein identity among their gene products, and their present location in the genome (in the same or different chromosome). Please note that the protein identity for older duplications, whose products might have undergone successive duplication, corresponds to the averaged identity of all products and derived duplicates.