

Correlation of thermal and urea stabilities. The T_{50} and $[\text{urea}]_{50}$ stability measurements are highly correlated, indicating that they consistently measure a universal aspect of protein stability. The Pearson correlation coefficient is $R = 0.82$, with a probability of $P \approx 10^{-7}$ that a correlation this large would be observed among the 46 measurements by chance.