

Figure S2 Separation of forebrain from hindbrain. One end of fine, curved forceps was wedged into the natural division between forebrain and hindbrain (dashed white line). The forceps were then closed, which acted to scoop out the hindbrain while leaving the underlying cortex intact.