Figure S3: Model predictions using different prevalence levels under current climate conditions. Notice that the model outputs are biased in the same direction than the input prevalence, with a prevalence of 10% producing a smaller potential range than higher prevalence levels.