

Supplementary Figure 14. Control of inflammation by local and systemic action of IL-27 in influenza. Hypothetical scheme of interactions. Systemic administration of rIL-27 during influenza alleviates immunopathology by reducing neutrophil and monocyte influx to the lungs and predominantly might act by affecting chemokine (red dots) production and deposition intravascularly.