

Table of contents entry:

We show that the kinesin motor surface density affects the size distribution and density of self-assembled microtubule spools, indicating that spools are the result of forces which motors impart on gliding microtubules.

