

Fig. S2. Effects of bilateral microinjections of different doses of propranolol into the dorsal hippocampus on the exploratory activity in response to a novel condition. There were no significant effects of different injections on overall locomotion -- either the distance travelled or time spent in motion ($n = 5$ per group).