COMMENTS TO AUTHORS

The topic of this perspective article is of interest for the scientific community working in this field. It is presented in a clear and concise form.

The question of myelin repair in Multiple Sclerosis is a hot topic for the scientific community working in this field, and even more for patients who experience motor disability and fatigue.

The perspective of revisiting some drugs that might have an effect on myelin repair, in addition to their immunomodulatory activity, is an avenue that is worth to take.
