

SHAREABLE PDF

An Italian sacrifice to the COVID-19 epidemic

Stefano Nava¹, Roberto Tonelli^{2,3} and Enrico M. Clini ³

Affiliations: ¹University Hospital of Bologna S. Orsola-Malpighi, Respiratory Diseases and Respiratory Intensive Care Unit, Dept of Medical Sciences DIMES, University of Bologna Alma Mater, Bologna, Italy. ²Clinical and Experimental Medicine PhD Program, University of Modena Reggion Emilia, Modena, Italy. ³University Hospital of Modena Policlinico, Respiratory Diseases Unit, Dept of Medical and Surgical Sciences SMECHIMAI, University of Modena Reggion Emilia, Modena, Italy.

Correspondence: Enrico M. Clini, University of Modena, University Hospital of Modena Policlinico, Via del Pozzo 71, Modena, 41141, Italy. E-mail: enrico.clini@unimore.it

@ERSpublications

The report of Italian doctors who died during the COVID-19 outbreak should inform us not to forget
<https://bit.ly/3cbSbkU>

Cite this article as: Nava S, Tonelli R, Clini EM. An Italian sacrifice to the COVID-19 epidemic. Eur Respir J 2020; 55: 2001445 [<https://doi.org/10.1183/13993003.01445-2020>].

This single-page version can be shared freely online.

As reported by Newsweek magazine on 4 April 2020 [1], coronavirus has killed over 100 doctors and nurses around the world, nearly half of whom are reported to be in Italy. This report, however, underestimated the size of the problem. To date, 151 doctors and more than 40 nurses have died in Italy from coronavirus disease 2019 (COVID-19).