CYP17A1 deficient XY mice display susceptibility to atherosclerosis, altered lipidomic profile and atypical sex development

Redouane Aherrahrou^{a,b}, Alexandra E. Kulle^c, Natalia Alenina^{d,e}, Ralf Werner^{f,g}, Simeon Vens-Cappell^h, Michael Bader^{d,e,i,j}, Heribert Schunkert^k, Jeanette Erdmann^{a,I,}, Zouhair Aherrahrou^{a,I,}

Supplementary Figure 3: qPCR analysis of CYP17A1 in different human atherosclerotic cell lines and organs: Gene expression analysis of CYP17A1 was performed in various human tissues: Heart, Liver, Kidney, and cells types: liver cells (HepG2), human embryonic kidney cells (HEK293), Human aortic smooth muscle cells (HASMC), confluent HASMC, TPH-1 and U293 monocytes-derived macrophages cells.