Dear Laura,

NEJM authors do not need to request a license to reuse their own material in another journal article. As a courtesy, NEJM permits its authors to reuse their own material in certain manners, without having to seek a license to do so. The NEJM author may find this information at <https://www.nejm.org/author-center/permissions>

Thank you,

Subject: Query regarding re-use of data

Dear Sir/Madam,

I am writing on behalf of the authors of the NEJM published article “Macitentan and morbidity and mortality in pulmonary arterial hypertension” (N Engl J Med. 2013;369:809-818) with a query about re-using data.

The authors wish to reuse data from one of the tables in this manuscript in a new manuscript – could you please confirm that this is ok in accordance with the author permissions granted by the NEJM (detailed below) (and that no formal licence to reuse the material is required)?

- “the New England Journal of Medicine (NEJM) is pleased to grant authors rights to reuse published versions of their articles, including portions, such as figures and tables, in book chapters or other educational articles written by author”

The authors have provided a reference to the original article as follows: “From the New England Journal of Medicine, Pulido T, Adzerikho I, Channick RN, Delcroix M, Galiè N, Ghofrani HA, Jansa P, Jing ZC, Le Brun FO, Mehta S, Mittelholzer CM, Perchenet L, Sastry BK, Sitbon O, Souza R, Torbicki A, Zeng X, Rubin LJ, Simonneau G, Macitentan and morbidity and mortality in pulmonary arterial hypertension, 809, 809-818. Copyright © (2013) Massachusetts Medical Society. Reprinted with permission.”

Many thanks,

Laura
