

The method utilized to purify the SARS-CoV-2 N protein can affect its molecular properties

Aneta Tarczewska^{a+}, Marta Kolonko-Adamska^{a+}, Mirosław Zarębski^b, Jurek Dobrucki^b,

Andrzej Ożyhar^a, Beata Greb-Markiewicz^{a*}

^aDepartment of Biochemistry, Molecular Biology and Biotechnology, Faculty of Chemistry, Wrocław University of Science and Technology, Wybrzeże Wyspiańskiego 27, 50-370 Wrocław, Poland

^bDepartment of Cell Biophysics, Faculty of Biochemistry, Biophysics and Biotechnology, Jagiellonian University, Gronostajowa 7, 30-387, Cracow, Poland

+First authors

*Corresponding authors:

E-mail: aneta.tarczewska@pwr.edu.pl

marta.kolonko@pwr.edu.pl

beata.greb-markiewicz@pwr.edu.pl

Supplementary material

Figure Legends

Figure S1. The SEC-MALS profile of the N_p1 sample. The SEC-MALS profile of the N_p1 sample (magenta line) was superimposed on the SEC-MALS profile of the N_p2 sample (dashed blue line).

SEC-MALS

