Future Proofing Frontline Healthcare Workers in Times of Pandemic and Other Crises

Explanatory Statement

You are invited to take part in this study. Please read this statement before deciding whether or not to participate in this research. If you would like further information regarding any aspect of this project, you are encouraged to visit our website: <https://www.covid-19-frontline.com.au>

What does the research involve?

The aim of the study is to explore the social, work and mental health effects experienced by frontline health workers during the COVID-19 pandemic and beyond. We aim to examine factors that promote good mental health and risk factors that contribute to poorer mental health.

Participating in this study will involve completing an online questionnaire, which has been piloted and shown to take approximately 15-20 minutes. These questions will include information about you and your work, what you do to stay healthy, and the impact the COVID-19 pandemic has had on your health and wellbeing, your social situation, and your work.

Why were you chosen for this research?

You have been invited to participate in this study because you are a 'frontline health worker'. In this study frontline health workers are defined as medical, nursing, or allied health professionals, clinical scientists/physiologists/technicians, healthcare students or clerical staff working in hospitals, primary care, the community, private practice or paramedicine.

You have been invited via your Head of Department/Director of Training/manager, your professional association, a colleague or friend, or by advertisement of this study.

You do NOT need to have worked with patients with COVID-19 to take part. We would like to hear from both people who have and who have not worked with people with COVID-19.

Consenting to participate in this project and withdrawing from the research

Participation in this study is voluntary. It is your decision whether to participate. If at any stage, you feel uncomfortable or you feel the questions are too personal, you may stop completing the survey and close it. As this study is an anonymous survey once you submit any answers withdrawal of data will not be possible.

Possible benefits and risks to participate

There are unlikely to be any immediate direct benefits from participating in the study, other than reflecting on your current mental health and wellbeing. Participating in this study will provide data that will help us understand the supports that frontline healthcare workers need and want when confronted with a crisis situation like COVID-19. This information is important for supporting health workers during futures crises.

We do not anticipate that there are immediate risks to you; but we acknowledge that reflecting on the impact of COVID-19 may arouse feelings of disquiet or distress. If this is the case, we encourage you to seek support and we have provided advice and links on our website and at the conclusion of the survey.

Confidentiality

The survey is anonymous and confidential. At no point in the study will we be asking your name, date of birth or address. Your survey results will not be considered individually, instead the results from all the participants will be combined for analysis to provide overall trends when data are presented

Storage of Data

projectredcap.org

Data will be collected through a Melbourne Health account on REDcap, which is password protected. 2 It will only be accessible by the researchers involved in the study. Data will be kept for 5 years and then destroyed via deletion of electronic files when no longer needed.

Results

Once the study is complete, a summary of the findings will be posted on our website. Interim analyses (after 2 months) of our research will also be made available on the study website.

Complaints

Should you have any concerns or complaints about the conduct of the project, you are welcome to contact the Manager, Melbourne Health Human Research Ethics Committee, Ph: 03 93428530; or email: research@mh.org.au
