1 STUDY INTRODUCTION

Psychiatric and substance use disorders remain an ever-present challenge to public health, incurring significant cost to affected individuals, their families, and society. Mental illness is estimated to contribute ~13% to the global burden of disease¹. Conditions such as depression, anxiety, and substance use disorders are leading contributors to the burden of disease in the United States². Psychiatric and substance use disorders also incur significant financial cost. In the United states, the estimated annual cost ranges from ~$320 billion for serious mental illnesses³ to ~$78 billion for opioid use⁴. Importantly, these disorders rarely manifest in isolation, showing strong patterns of comorbidity and shared risk factors^{5–7}.

Historically, estimating the prevalence of psychiatric disorders has relied on nationally representative or population-based surveys^{8–10}, or through clinical ascertainment¹¹. More recently, large-scale biobanks and healthcare systems are becoming increasingly used for research purposes. To date, resources such as the UK Biobank¹², the Million Veteran Program¹³, Biobank Japan¹⁴, and FinnGen, among others, have proved to be an invaluable resource in the understanding of the causes of various psychiatric and related disorders. While valuable, these resources may not reflect the unique context within the US. Additionally, much of the research conducted in this area has focused primarily on individuals of European ancestries^{15,16}. This is despite the previously observed differences in rates and patterns of psychiatric disorders by raceethnicity, as well as known risk factors that are especially pertinent in the US given its sordid history with racism and inequality. In order to improve diversity in health-focused epidemiological research, further interrogate existing health disparities, and deliver on the promise of equitable precision medicine, the National Institutes of Health launched the All of Us program, a historic effort to collect and study data from at least one million people living in the United States¹⁷. Beginning in 2018, participants were able to complete surveys, provide genotypic data, and link their electronic health records to help build a comprehensive database of their health-related data. The goal of the All of Us program is to use this data to understand how biology, lifestyle and social determinants come together to affect health, and ultimately to treat and prevent illness.

The current analysis focuses on characterizing the prevalence, comorbidity, and sociodemographic disparities for psychiatric and substance use disorders in the All of Us database. We compare these estimates to those from nationally representative and population-based samples to help better understand the etiology of psychiatric disorders in All of Us, and the participants that make up this new sample.

2 THE ALL OF US BIOBANK

The All of Us Research Program is a prospective cohort study aiming to recruit at least one million individuals in the United States, with the overall goal of providing a unique resource to study the effects of lifestyle, environment and genomics on health and health outcomes. Participant recruitment is predominantly done through participating health care provider organizations and in partnership with Federally Qualified Health Centers, with an emphasis on recruiting persons affiliated with those centers. Interested potential participants can also enroll in the program as direct volunteers, visiting community-based enrollment sites. Initial enrollment, informed consent (including consent to share EHRs), and baseline health surveys are done digitally through the All of Us program website (https://joinallofus.org). Once this step is completed, the participant is invited to undergo a basic physical exam and biospecimen collection at the affiliated healthcare site. Participant follow-up is done in two ways, passively via linkage with EHR and actively by periodic follow-up surveys. For this study, we included data from participants enrolled in the study between May 6, 2018 and April 1st, 2021 (All of Us release 5, N = 331,380). This work was performed on data collected by the previously described All of Us Research Program using the All of Us Researcher Workbench, a cloud-based platform where approved researchers can access and analyze All of Us data. All analyses were in concordance with the ethical guidelines outlined in the All of Us Code of Conduct and the IRB at SUNY Downstate.

2.1 Psychiatric Diagnoses

We derived diagnoses based on phecodes from registered ICD10CM codes in the All of Us system. Individuals with 2+ ICD codes were considered as having a diagnosis, based on prior analyses in electronic health systems¹⁸. First, we selected all relevant ICD codes for the more prevalent psychiatric disorders. We then clustered these ICD codes using phecodes¹⁹ from the PheWAS package in R²⁰. Phecodes provide a convenient way to cluster codes in EHR based data²¹ and have been validated previously^{21,22}. A full list of the EHR descriptions, ICD10CM codes, and corresponding phecodes is provided in eTable 1. We focused our main analyses on the following broad clusters of psychiatric disorders:

- Any mood disorder (MOOD): those with a registered diagnosis of major depressive disorder, dysthymic disorder, or bipolar disorder.
- Any anxiety disorder (ANX) : those with a registered diagnosis generalized anxiety disorder, social anxiety/agoraphobia, any phobia, or anxiety disorder (unspecified).

- Any substance use disorder (SUD): those with a registered diagnosis of an alcohol use disorder or other substance use disorder.
- Any stress-related disorder (STRESS): those with a registered diagnosis of post-traumatic stress disorder or an adjustment disorder.
- Schizophrenia (SCZ): those with any registered diagnosis of schizophrenia.
- Any personality disorder (PERS): those with a registered diagnosis of antisocial, borderline, or schizotypal personality disorder.

2.2 Sociodemographic Risk Factors

All of Us provides extensive measures of social and demographic characteristics. Where possible, we tried to match characteristics to other nationally representative samples⁸. A full breakdown of the sample characteristics is presented in eTable 2. Our analyses included the following sociodemographic risk factors (as defined by the All of Us database):

- Age: ages 18-29 (reference), ages 30-44, ages 45-64, ages 65 and older
- Sex assigned at birth: female (reference), male, and those who selected neither male nor female
- Gender identity: woman (reference) man, and those who selected neither man nor women
- Sexual orientation: those who identify as straight/heterosexual (reference) vs. all others
- Race-ethnicity: non-Hispanic White (reference), Black/African American, Hispanic or Latino/a/x, Asian, other race-ethnicity, and those who identify as multiracial
- Educational attainment: less than high school (reference), high school diploma or equivalent, some college, and college degree or more
- Annual household income: under $25K annually (reference), $25K-$50K annually, $50K-$75K annually, $75K-$100K annually, and $100K or more annually
- Access to health insurance: those who report having insurance (reference) vs those who report no insurance
- Country of origin: US born (reference) vs foreign born

The raw prevalence for each group of disorder (mood, anxiety, substance, stress-related, schizophrenia, and personality) across each of the sociodemographic covariates is presented in eFigure 1.

3 SENSITIVITY ANALYSES OF EHR-BASED PHENOTYPES

Using electronic health records (EHR) for research is a rapidly advancing area. Prior work in medical informatics has shown that using EHR based diagnoses and other administrative data to derive cases can vary across the type of disorder one considers, with more severe disorders generally demonstrating the most reliable measures²³. Previous work in the PsycheMERGE consortium has used the standard of two or more registered ICD codes as the definition for being considered a "case"¹⁸.

In order to determine whether more stringent definitions of being a "case" altered the prevalence of psychiatric problems in the All of Us database, we ran a series of sensitivity analyses. We restricted the definition of having disorder from 1 or more registered ICD codes and up to 4 or more registered ICD codes. Across all disorders, the total number of "cases" (not mutually exclusive) dropped as thresholds became more restrictive (Total cases 1+ ICD code(s) = 202,422; Total cases 2+ ICD codes = 137,265, Total cases 3+ ICD codes = 106,737; Total cases 4+ ICD codes 88,093). eFigure 2 presents the drop in those meeting criteria of being a "case" as the threshold becomes more restrictive for each disorder included in the analysis. Overall, each disorder follows a similar pattern regardless of the prevalence of that disorder (see eTable 3 for exact counts by disorder). Additionally, when we look at the patterns of comorbidity across ICD thresholds (eFigure 3), we see that these patterns are largely unchanged from using any diagnosis, with the exception that mood disorders became slightly more prevalent than SUD for those with only one registered diagnosis. The main difference is related to the difference in the raw prevalence across thresholds above: as we are more restrictive, fewer participants meet criteria for a given disorder. Regardless of the threshold for defining cases, we see that the correlation between disorders is approximately the same (eFigure 4). Finally, estimates for risk across sociodemographic covariates is relatively stable to inclusion threshold (see eTable4 and eTable5).

Use of diagnoses based on single ICD codes represent a "best-case scenario" for those interested in psychiatric disorders in the All of Us biobank. We have no "gold standard" measurement (such as a physician chart review or Structured Clinical Interview for DSM Disorders confirmed diagnoses²⁴) to validate each threshold. However, future research can leverage the genetic data to compare genetic correlations across thresholds with results from published genome wide association studies (GWAS) of confirmed cases. For example, research with the Alcohol Use Disorder Identification Test (AUDIT), has followed this approach and identified AUDIT thresholds that are most likely to capture those who meet criteria for AUD²⁵.
