

Research Highlights

- Carbon quantum dots (CQDs)-based detection for antibiotics and pesticides has been reviewed
- Unique optical and electrochemical properties of CQDs enable to develop different sensing strategies
- Current CQDs-based sensors lack specificity due to difficulty in structural fine-tuning
- Further studies are required to elucidate CQD structures for improving selectivity