Supplementary Table 2. Information and questions about new PrEP Modalities

Information	Question
Injectable PrEP
“At the moment, there is a trial on injectable PrEP. This means that you will only need to receive an injection of PrEP once every two months. You don’t need to take a PrEP pill every day.”	“Is this something that you might be interested in if it becomes available in Australia?”                      “Can you please tell me why you might be interested/not interested in injectable PrEP?”
PreP implants
“There is also another study to investigate PrEP implants. This means that they will insert an implant containing PrEP under the skin of your arm. The study suggests that you will only need to replace the implant once or twice a year. You don’t need to take a PrEP pill every day.”	“Is this something that you might be interested in if it becomes available in Australia?”                      “Can you please tell me why you might be interested/not interested in PrEP implants?”
